Bandit Is Captured Red-Handed by A. D. T. Roundsman in Chicago Holdup

Rare personal bravery and fast thinking on the part of an A. D. T. roundsman, in addition to his policy of "taking nothing for granted," brought about the downfall of a Chicago holdup man on December 16.

Roundsman McLean was the hero of the day—sharing the honors with the manager of the store that was attacked, who was described by the newspapers as a "demure blonde miss," with nerve enough to press the A. D. T. alarm button while the bandit pressed a revolver to her side.

Shortly before nine o'clock on the evening of the 16th the bandit entered the Stayson Shop, at 2310 West Madison street. Elsie Jacobson, manager, was in charge, assisted by Mrs. H. Bartholome, a clerk. Also in the store at the time were two customers and the clerk's husband.

"Stick 'em up," was the crisp greeting of the bandit. "Get in the back room." All the while he was emphasizing the seriousness of his remarks by seemingly careless gestures with his revolver.

As Miss Jacobson retreated, she brushed against the holdup button, which she knew would bring assistance, and, despite the fact that the burglar was right beside her, he failed to notice her action.

The rest did not go off according to the bandit's schedule.

Roundsman McLean received the alarm at 8:58 o'clock. One and one-half minutes later he arrived in front of the store. No one was in sight. He opened the door, tip-toed in, and proceeded silently to the rear. A glance at the situation told him that action was necessary, and that he had better watch rear, where I suspected the holdup was in progress, I was on my guard for any sudden moves the bandit might make. I figured that if I waited for the police, the burglar would probably shoot his way out when he saw me in front. So I decided to get the drop on him. With my gun drawn, I entered the store. But I was confronted with a trying situation, because the bandit hesitated to drop his gun. When I cocked mine, he dropped his quickly, however. If he had not done so, I would have fired, as I was suspecting that he might trick me into reaching for his gun and then shoot at me."

Before coming with the A. D. T., McLean was a patrolman for a private agency.

In a special interview for THE TRANSMITTER, he spoke as follows concerning the recent Chicago capture:

"Of course, I was glad to capture the bandit, and while I have been a roundsman for only a short time, I discovered that it does not require experience to know how to act when responding to a holdup alarm.

"I took nothing for granted when I entered the store alone. When I found no one around, naturally my suspicion was aroused. I knew that I had to think fast, and as I approached the out for trickery, for the bandit looked desperate.

All five people were lying prone on the floor and the bandit was tying their feet together with strong rope.

"Stick 'em up" was heard in the little shop for the second time within three minutes, but this time the crisp words brought relief and not terror to the victims.

The burglar jumped—and as his left hand went toward the ceiling, his right slowly advanced toward McLean. In the palm was his revolver. McLean suspected a trick, and when the burglar seemed reluctant to drop the pistol, McLean calmly cocked his own revolver and proceeded to aim it for some serious action. With this the culprit wilted.

The police arrived at that moment, and started to search the man. They found several rings and pieces of jew-

Roundsmen Capture Two Burglars in Salt Lake City After Exciting Chase

Prompt action by the American District Telegraph Company, and what threatened to be a running gun fight between two roundsmen and two burglars resulted in complete defeat for the bandits and a notable victory for the A. D. T. in Salt Lake City recently.

The premise attacked was that of the J. Panek Fur Shop, at 124 East Broadway. The alarm was received at 12.52 A. M. and Roundsmen W. H. Johnstone and W. H. Shurtleff responded.

Just as they turned the nearby corner they heard the sound of breaking glass. Then they saw two men run down the street with coats on their arms. Surmising a "window break," they started in hot pursuit. The robbers ran through a vacant lot and then started to scale a fence, hoping to make their getaway.

At just the right moment Johnstone fired his revolver at the robbers and the desired psychological effect was gained. They surrendered. Two fur coats and one fur neckpiece, as well as a display stand, were found in their possession.

Chief of Police Burbidge of the Salt Lake force commended the roundsmen for their prompt and fearless action.

A strong letter of praise for the service rendered, as well as for the efficiency of the A. D. T. equipment, has been received from Mr. Panek, proprietor of the store. It is printed in the adjoining column.

Ring Out, Wild Bells!

The watchman for the Osborne McMillan Elevator Co., of Minneapolis, Minn., takes all the credit for discovering a new way of ringing out the old year and ringing in the new. He pulled his last box eleven times at exactly 12 o'clock midnight just as the new year was being ushered in.

In order to make his New Year's celebration complete he was joined in a few minutes by the fire department, which had been notified by the A. D. T. Although a regulation fire alarm signal had not been received, it was feared that there was trouble. The Central Sta-

Gentlemen:

At about 12:30 A. M. this morning two burglars crashed through my plate glass show window and literally cleaned out the entire lot of valuable fur coats and throws displayed therein.

The efficiency of your A. D. T. burglar alarm was again demonstrated to me through the prompt arrival of your roundsmen, Messrs. Johnstone and Shurtleff. These gentlemen are to be commended for their splendid work in making two captures in a running gun fight in which they recovered all of the loot that had been stolen. It is indeed gratifying to know that your company employ such competent and capable men in protecting your subscribers' interests.

Today I had the satisfaction of seeing the captives in the "observation room" of the police station; a pair of culprits who had taken long odds and matched their wits against a burglar alarm system they could not defeat. I think every business man should give your service serious consideration, for I find it is the only practical and the most economical means of protecting one's property.

Five years ago I was practically forced into having your system installed through burglary losses. Since then I am fully convinced that this was the best investment I ever made. Now I can go home at night and forget the store, knowing that I am protected against petty losses as well as burglary by an organization capable of handling any emergency, and for which this letter is written to thank you.

Yours truly,
J. PANEK FUR CO.,

tion operators therefore decided to take no chances and gave the call to the fire department. Although their tempers might have been slightly ruffled, the firemen took it all in in good spirit and left wishing the watchman and the A. D. T. a Happy New Year.

Holdup Alarm Frustrates Burglars

Three bank robbers were routed at noon on Friday, January 9, at the Columbia Savings Bank, 418 Jackson Street, Milwaukee, Wis., when an employee pressed a floor button connected to the A. D. T. holdup alarm, bringing almost immediate assistance from the police and A. D. T. roundsmen.

As soon as the alarm was received in the A. D. T. Central Office, it was given to the police who immediately relayed it over their short wave radio broadcasting system. The call was picked up by the nearest automobile patrol which speeded to the scene of the attack.

Two of the holdup men had entered the bank while the third remained on guard outside. Louis Giuli, secretary of the bank and son of the president, became suspicious of the pair and at once pushed the floor button which started the A. D. T. and police into action.

After they had forced several persons to lie on the floor and as police sirens sounded in the distance, the robbers became alarmed and without waiting to collect their loot, ran out of the door and made their escape as quickly as possible.

The officials of the bank were highly pleased with the A. D. T. performance and the operation of the police broadcasting system, which combination frustrated the plans of the robbers.

This was the second time that gunmen had attempted to rob the institution. On October 29, 1929, the bank was held up by three armed men, who forced several bank officials into a vault and took $5,467 in currency. The A. D. T. alarm was installed shortly afterward to prevent a similar occurrence.

A. D. T. Burglar Alarm has been installed in the Cleveland Museum of Art to protect the world famous Guelph Treasure now on exhibition. The exhibit comprises 80 objects created by the most skilled artists of the middle ages and are largely reliquaries, monstrosities and portable altars used in the service of the church.

Roundsman Burke Is Killed in Stirring Gun Fight With Two Cleveland Bandits

ALBERT N. BURKE

LATE NEWS FLASH —

The murder of Albert N. Burke has been solved by the suicide of Robert Elrick, 24, after being trapped in his home by detectives on January 17th. Elrick was associated with a gang responsible for the holdup of numerous gasoline stations throughout the city. The capture of other members of the gang led to the finding of Elrick who took his own life when discovered.

Albert Norman Burke, A. D. T. roundsman at Cleveland, died at 8:30 A. M. on January 8, from three bullet wounds suffered earlier in the day in a furious and spectacular gun battle with two thugs who attempted to rob the show window of the Basch Jewelry Company on East Ninth Street.

One of the gunmen was shot in the left shoulder and an innocent bystander received a wound in the left hand from a stray bullet.

It was the first gun fight in downtown Cleveland in months, and was one of the most sensational in the city's criminal annals. Twenty shots were exchanged during the battle, with scores of early morning motorists and pedestrians attracted to the scene by the roar of the guns and splitting flashes of flames in the darkness.

A. D. T. Receives Alarm

The alarm was received at the A. D. T. Central Office at 1:43 A. M. and the police were notified immediately. The store is diagonally across the street from the A. D. T. Central Office. Roundsmen Burke and Dever were promptly dispatched.

As Burke and Dever left, two of the signal operators stepped to the front window to see if they could determine the cause of the alarm. As the roundsmen reached the street, the operators saw a man leave the entrance of the Basch Jewelry Company and disappear around the corner.

L. MYERS

Burke was the first to arrive at the store where he encountered the remaining burglar and engaged in a tussle with him. As Dever came up, the robber gave Burke a shove and fired one shot at him. The thug then ran down the street, firing over his shoulder. The two roundsmen returned the fire. Three of the bullets struck Burke and one went over Dever's head, hitting the pedestrian.

Bandit Escapes

Dever chased the burglar as far as East 9th and Euclid Avenue where the latter commandeered a taxicab and ordered the driver to take him to East 68th Street and Carnegie Avenue.

In the meantime Roundsman Myers and Squad 13 of the Cleveland Police had arrived at the store. The taxi driver who drove the gunman away stated that the police responding to the alarm passed within a few feet of his car on Euclid Avenue.

At the hospital it was found that an immediate operation was necessary. Arrangements were made for a blood transfusion and G. W. McMannis, A. D. T. manager, took the necessary examination and qualified. Death, however, overtook Mr. Burke before the transfusion could be made.

Funeral services were held on Monday morning, January 12, from his residence and from St. Thomas' Parish Church. It was attended by Mr. Burke's co-workers in the A. D. T., six of whom acted as pall bearers. A police escort was provided by the Cleveland Police Department.

Director of Public Safety Barry has personally extended his sympathy to Mrs. Burke.

BANK BANDITRY DURING 1930

Bank banditry during 1930 accounted for 261 daylight raids against member banks of the American Bankers Association and 230 similar robberies against non-members, according to James E. Baum, Deputy Manager, Protection Department of the American Bankers Association.

In addition, 42 night burglaries were perpetrated during the year, a total of 533 bank robberies, or more than ten attacks weekly. The holdup record for this year shows an unprecedented increase of 50 per cent in the number of attacks as compared with those reported in 1929.

Never in the history of banking have banks proved so vulnerable to criminal attack, said Mr. Baum.

The American Bankers Association has continuously urged the installation of safeguards and protective devices such as those supplied by the A. D. T. The installation of this equipment, together with increased vigilance on the part of the bankers themselves, will do much to cut down this astounding total of attacks.

RADIO ASSUMES IMPORTANCE AS ALLY OF A. D. T.

Undoubtedly the use of radio broadcasting equipment by the police is effecting a much closer co-operation between the A. D. T. and police departments. Under this system, which has been installed in many cities, it is possible to utilize radio waves for sending alarms from police headquarters direct to automobile patrols covering every section of the city.

In Louisville, Ky., Col. George M. Ratcliffe, Chief of Police, has virtually placed the police broadcasting system at the disposal of the A. D. T. Since its inauguration, the police department has been broadcasting to its cruising patrol cars all burglar alarms given them by the A. D. T. and, in a number of cases, the police have been able to assist materially in frustrating attempted burglaries.

The plan has worked out so well that Colonel Ratcliffe now desires to extend it to the investigation of watchmen delinquencies. This will, of course, apply only to those delinquencies which the A. D. T. considers serious, due either to hazardous conditions or the delinquency of a watchman who is habitually prompt.

The alarms will be broadcast as soon as a watchman becomes delinquent, and the A. D. T. roundsmen and the police will conduct an investigation jointly. If the watchman is reached by telephone, or if he communicates with the Central Office, a recall will be broadcast.

If the plan proves successful in Louisville, it will doubtless be extended to Cincinnati, Columbus, Dayton and Indianapolis and other cities where police broadcasting systems are installed.

A REAL TESTIMONIAL

Fire departments value A. D. T. fire prevention services, as is evidenced in a letter received recently from William A. Moriarty of the Holyoke, Mass., Fire Department. He writes:

"In examination for promotion in the Fire Department a question often asked is: What measures of fire prevention and means of extinguishment of fires would you recommend for (a) office buildings, (b) factories? Describe them.

"If this question were asked in an examination that I am preparing for, I should certainly recommend an A. D. T. Protection Service, for from what little I have heard of it, I know it to be the very best preventive there is."

City Water Works Is A. D. T. Supervised

As a protection against possible catastrophes or emergencies which might threaten the entire water supply of Canton, Ohio, an A. D. T. Watchman's Supervisory system has been installed in the water works department pumping station and the water works shop.

The installation was made at the request of the Service Director, William H. Lehman, who was well aware of the potential dangers under the prevailing system of operation. Only one engineer is on duty at each station at any one time, the shifts being of eight-hour duration. Should anything occur to disable the man on duty much expensive equipment might be ruined before discovery of the mishap, according to Mr. Lehman.

Similar A. D. T. installations have been made in other cities where it is necessary to maintain "one man" stations in connection with city departments and public utilities.

Chicago and Cleveland Head List As Capture Club Ends First Year

Considering unemployment and the holiday season, the number of captures during the final month of the year was surprisingly small. The total amounted to 19, the majority of whom came to grief in Chicago and Cleveland.

The Capture Club Honor Roll for the year appears on pages 7 and 8 of this issue.

Burglar Alarm Scares Absent Minded Janitor

William Walker, janitor at the Sears-Roebuck & Co. store in Youngstown, Ohio, forgot to notify the A. D. T. when he entered to fire the furnace on the morning of November 29. His neglect to do so, however, gave him a good jolt and demonstrated the efficiency of A. D. T. and the local police.

A Burglar Alarm was received in the A. D. T. office at 5:29 A. M. As no notice of entry had been given, the police were notified and A. D. T. Roundsmen R. Blair and C. Lants were dispatched to the premises. The men entered the store with drawn guns and encountered a man in the dark who was believed to be a burglar.

"Wait, don't shoot," said the man, who quickly identified himself as the janitor and admitted that he had forgotten to give proper notice on entering.

Signal Service Is Rendered in Houston

"It is the desire of our management to express to your company our sincere thanks and appreciation for the prompt and faithful services rendered on November 22, in connection with the accident and injury of our watchman."

With these warm words of praise, Adolph Pfeffer, manager of the Adolph Pfeffer Rice Milling Co., of Houston, wrote the final act of a drama enacted in the Texas city on November 22.

The Central Station noticed that the watchman for the premises was late in sending in his ten o'clock signal. A phone call to the premises was answered by Mr. Pfeffer, who offered to find the watchman and then notify the Central Station of the trouble.

Within a very few minutes, Mr. Pfeffer called the Central Station, stating that he had been unable to locate the watchman, and that, as he was unarmed, he did not relish the idea of making a protracted search of the premises alone. A roundsman was dispatched immediately, and upon arriving at the plant, he and the manager started the search.

The watchman was found at the bottom of the elevator shaft, and the position of the Tour key indicated that he probably fell from the third floor. His injuries proved fatal.

Small Buildings—But Protected In a Big Way

A. D. T. protection systems have been installed in the world's largest and the world's tallest buildings, but certainly a small building in Buffalo, N. Y., deserves a palm of recognition because it seems to "have gone A. D. T. in a big way."

At the left above is the O'Brien, Potter and Stafford building, in which there are fifty-five—count them—units of A. D. T. protection to insure the maximum of safety in the conduct of the brokerage business. The installation consists of the following:

- 28 units of Phonetalarm in one vault.
- 5 Police Call units.
- 16 Tour units.
- 5 Bronze Fire Manual units.
- 1 Emergency Call Box unit.

Another small building that makes full use of A. D. T. protection services is the Zachry Store, in Atlanta, Ga., shown at the right above. This store is one of the most up-to-date clothing establishments in the South, and every possible protection means has been taken. There is a complete sprinkler system, supervised by A. D. T. Sprinkler Supervisory and Valve Alarm service, and in addition the watchmen are supervised by the A. D. T. Watchman's Tour and Manual Fire Alarm system.

A. L. Zachry has stated that "A. D. T. service in our old store was such that we would not have dared to call our new store complete without being covered by this service."

Sick Watchman Is Aided by the A. D. T.

The effectiveness of A. D. T. service in protecting the watchman as well as the property was shown in Detroit, Mich., on Nov. 28.

When the 11 P. M. signal was not received from the Oliver Machinery Company, the Central Station dispatched Roundsman Bogert to investigate. Upon arriving at the premises, he saw the watchman sitting on the first floor stairway with a lantern at his side, but the man made no effort to get up to let Bogert in.

Bogert quickly tried all of the entrances to the building and finally discovered an open door. He ran to the watchman's side and asked what the trouble was. The man answered that he could not walk.

Prompt action by Mr. Bogert brought Mr. Garnett, superintendent of the plant, to the premises, and immediate medical attention as well. Mr. Garnett complimented the organization upon its efficient handling of the situation.

Unprotected Store Has Loss of $40,000

A burglary involving a loss of more than $40,000 in gems at the Kay Jewelry Company, Columbus, Ohio, on Wednesday, January 7, offers definite proof of the value of adequate protective devices.

An employee of the store was waylaid on his way home and forced to return and work the combination of the vault, which contained every diamond and watch in the establishment. He was then handcuffed to a shelf in the vault while the robbers made away with their loot.

The robbery was made easy by the fact that the store was not protected by a Central Station Burglar Alarm system. The burglars said: "We know this place isn't wired for burglars," and it was therefore an easy matter for them to enter the store after it was once closed, without causing an alarm.

A local newspaper commented as follows: "The jewelry establishment was not wired with the American District Telegraph system, which would have registered an alarm when the store was entered, even though entrance was made with a regulation key." The omission of the service in this case undoubtedly prompted the robbery.

A. D. T. Helps to Spank Bad Boys

Boys will be boys—but bad boys get caught

A distress signal received from the Texas Vegetable Oil Company, of San Antonio, at 2:35 P. M. on December 14, brought A. D. T. roundsmen promptly to the premises. They found the watchman attempting to dislodge six boys, ranging in age from eight to fifteen years, who had barricaded themselves in the meal room.

The gang was evidently out for mischief and set in motion the entire electrical machinery of the plant. When the watchman tried to interfere, he was bombarded by a barrage of stones. He quickly decided that help was necessary.

When the A. D. T. roundsmen arrived with detectives, who had been dispatched from police headquarters, the boys fled, but were captured and taken to the police station without ceremony.

Flaming Youth Knows

One of the A. D. T.'s star commercial representatives reports the following conversation which he overheard in Cleveland's alleged tough district, "The Roaring Third."

Two small negro boys were passing the time of day.

"Hey, Sammy," said the taller and blacker one, "was dat your brudder dat de cops shot at last night over near Sacks' Brothers Metal Yard?"

"No, siree, big boy," was the answer. "My big brother am smart. He knows 'nuf to keep a long 'ways off from those — places dat hab dat white stuff round de windows."

"Hot dawg," were the only words expressed by the other lad, but they seemed adequate.

A. D. T. Roundsmen Cage Wild Animals

A. D. T. employees are often called upon to perform unusual duties but this is probably the first time that any of them have been called upon to display their ability as animal trainers.

The incident took place in the premises of Mitchell's New York Fur Company at Baltimore, Md. on December 12, when at 6 A. M. two foxes and two coons on display in the show window became restless and started fighting, breaking the Burglar Alarm wires and causing an alarm to be received at the A. D. T. office.

Roundsmen Gehring and Cassidy raced to the store fearing burglars but soon discovered the cause of the disturbance. The report does not show what charms were used on the infuriated animals but nevertheless they were quickly caged so as not to cause any further damage.

elry that he had taken from the five people, as well as several watches.

Miss Jacobson, owner of the store, has written as follows:

"I wish to acknowledge your report of December 16, at which time your officer McLean captured a holdup man in our store while five persons were being tied up, at the point of a gun by a lone bandit who had forced all to lie on the floor in the rear room of our store.

"We also take this opportunity to congratulate your company for the courageous and businesslike manner in which McLean entered our store at the critical moment and prevented a large loss of money and jewelry.

"I wish also to state that it would have been a physical impossibility to have captured this bandit had it not been for your holdup system."

COMPLETE CAPTURE CLUB ROSTER FOR 1930

The complete list of Capture Club members for 1930 is presented below. This includes the names of one hundred and forty-eight A. D. T. roundsmen who have participated in the capture of burglars during the year, together with the number of captures credited to each. The list has been considerably augmented since August, when the roster for the first six months was published.

The leaders of the Capture Club are: H. L. Aspaas of Chicago, who participated in the capture of fourteen burglars; A. Venslove of Cleveland, who ran a close second with eleven captures; D. Young, also of Cleveland, and C. Brush of Chicago, who each participated in the capture of nine burglars.

All members of the Club, however, deserve the highest praise for their courage, bravery and heroic actions in accordance with the highest ideals of A. D. T. service. Opportunities were greater for some than for others, and many whose names are not enrolled are deserving of much praise for performing efficiently the duties which were assigned to them.

The total number of burglars captured during the year was 230, which is an average of about nineteen per month. The banner month was August, when thirty burglars were captured. Chicago upheld its reputation and brought sixty-nine burglars to the toils. Cleveland proved to be next in line, with twenty-nine captures, while Detroit followed with fourteen.

Congratulations, Capture Club members—keep up the good work during 1931 and continue to make the A. D. T. symbol a sign to be feared by all those who lack a proper respect for law and order.

Annual Party In N. Y. Is Huge Success

"A good time was had by all" and "bigger and better" are hackneyed phrases, but they describe adequately the Eleventh Annual Dance held for the New York employees on Saturday afternoon, December 27, in the Engineering Department, General Office building.

CATHERINE J. FLEMING

The tasteful decorations and the magic tunes of a splendid "big time" orchestra helped everyone to shed their cares and worries for the afternoon. There was not an idle moment. Dancing, entertainment, refreshments, fancy hats, and all the rest filled the program.

It was evident that the movie and theatrical producers would be taking advantage of a real opportunity if they were to look over some of the A. D. T. beauties. They were all at the party, and it was the consensus of opinion that there were some real "stars" in the grand march that was led by Mr. McConnell and Miss Fleming.

Mr. Johnson and his charming wife were present and took part in the afternoon's fun.

Miss Pierce, of the Auditing Department, rendered several piano selections, which were very well received.

Harry Finney, as usual, danced with all of the damsels, and when last seen was emerging from a crutch store. Getting older, Harry?

The committee in charge, headed by Catherine J. Fleming, of the executive office, overlooked nothing that would provide a good time for all.

A. D. T. protection will be installed in Home Savings Bank of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, to safeguard their vaults. Their new building, now under construction, will have the latest and best equipment available.
